Human Solidarity

International Human Solidarity Day is celebrated on December 20. The concept of solidarity has defined the work of the United Nations since it began to draw the peoples and nations of the world together to promote peace, human rights and social and economic development. It is promoted as one of the fundamental and universal values that should underlie relations between peoples. As you consider the monthly Shalom Solidarity reflections on a variety of justice issues used by the entire congregation, Solidarity with South Sudan, solidarity with those who are poor for justice and a global community, solidarity with all creation, what does solidarity mean to you?
