This year's program, "A Conspiracy of Goodness: The Story of the Villagers of Le Chambon" examines the responses of the villagers of Le Chambon. As generations before us have asked, "Who are our neighbors?" That we find ourselves asking that question is itself a problem. The answer, as the history of genocides and our responses to them have shown, is complicated.

Not every knock on the door by those seeking safety was ignored; not every prospective victim was left on the side of the road. Pierre Sauvage, alive, thanks to the villagers of Le Chambon who opened their homes and invited his parents and thousands of other Jews in, will screen his documentary, Weapons of the Spirit. This film is the story of the village of Le Chambon where, during World War II, in and around one village in Nazi-occupied France, 5,000 Jews were sheltered by 5,000 Christians. This is the story of a unique conspiracy of goodness. Not a single Jew who came there was turned away or turned in. It was not until decades later that the villagers spoke of what they had done—and even then, only reluctantly. This film will help present the challenge that Holocaust rescuers make to us, asking, "What would you have done?"
