Joan Baez Concert May 9 benefits the Resource Center for Nonviolence Building for the Future Campaign

We hope you can join us for the rare Benefit Concert by Joan Baez, Friday, May 9, at the Rio Theatre in Santa Cruz.

Joan Baez, longtime human rights activist and performer, has been a supporter of the Resource Center for Nonviolence since it was founded in 1976.

Joan's concert will be the Public Launch for the Center's Building for the Future campaign. The Center purchased its new location at 612 Ocean St., Santa Cruz, in October 2011, and seeks funds to modernize the 50-year-old building.

The goal of the Building for the Future campaign is to transform the former church into a more visible, accessible, and sustainable community center, public forum and nonviolence training center.

Since 2012, over 100 local and national nonprofit and social change groups have used our venue. The building supports the Resource Center's mission of promoting the practice of nonviolence in personal and social change to create a more just, peaceful and sustainable world.

Adding a kitchen, accessibility improvements, better sound and lighting in the 200-seat auditorium, and other repairs will make the new Center a great home for the broad nonviolent social change community and nonprofit organizations.

Please consider donations to the Building for the Future Campaign in addition to your regular giving in support of RCNV's programs.

The Resource Center for Nonviolence is a strong local organization with deep international relationships that welcomes your stake in its future.

I hope you will be able to join us for the Joan Baez concert.

If you haven't been to the new location at 612 Ocean Street, we invite you to visit and learn more about the Center and this project.

Thank you for your consideration and support.
