

1 November, 2011

Media Release - For immediate distribution

A+ AUSTRALIAN WINE

Immerse yourself in Australian wine at One Day Wine School

The first of Wine Australia's One Day Wine Schools start this November, the schools are tailored for industry professionals wanting to keep abreast of Australia's evolving wine styles and taste what's coming out of Australia today.

Yvonne May Director Wine Australia describes the schools as, "a simple concept of inviting the trade to take 'one day' to enjoy total immersion in the world of Australian wine."

"It reflects the energy of the Australian wine industry and offers a look at family-owned businesses, emerging regions and cooler climate viticulture," May says.

The first series of One Day Wine Schools are led by wine journalist and broadcaster Tim Atkin MW and Australian wine writer Nick Stock, and consist of a morning of theory exploring Australia's regions and varietals followed by an afternoon of tasting themed flights. Participants can then opt to do an online exam which is WSET recognised. Participants with the best results will be invited on a two-week sponsored trip visiting vineyards in Australia.

"It's only a glimpse of the breadth and depth of the wines coming out of Australia today," continues May.

"But the structured programme provides an insight into the continent's geology and climatic influences, takes a look at the history of the industry and some of the key players within it, and is a platform for discussion as we taste through some 50 wines. It should be a dynamic day, and we are very pleased to have such eminent presenters."

More information on the One Day Wine Schools:

- Dates are November 28 and 29 in London, and December 2 in Bristol.
- The cost is £65 per participant and the duration is one day
- Registration for the One Day Wine Schools are taken on the WSET homepage here

For more information please contact Christophe Richelet on 0207 887 5334 or email: christophe.richelet@wineaustralia.com