

He was also named an honoree for Best of the Bar 2011/Bankruptcy by New Mexico Business Weekly, as judged by a panel of his peers in the New Mexico legal profession and a Southwest Super Lawyer in 2009, 2012 and 2013.

Furthermore, Mr. Giddens is one of the “go-to” bankruptcy lawyers for the Albuquerque Journal. He is quoted regularly by the newspaper regarding the legal ramifications of bankruptcy cases and matters making news. Mr. Giddens’s firm handles Chapters 7, 11, 12 and 13 cases and he represents creditors, as well as debtors.

In addition to bankruptcies, Mr. Giddens’s staff of five attorneys has extensive experience in business and consumer litigation, commercial real estate transactions, personal injury, construction law and estate planning.

Outside of work, Mr. Giddens believes in giving back to the community in which he lives. To this end, he is active in St. Stephen’s United Methodist Church, where he has chaired the Finance Ministry and the Capital Funds Campaign. He also participated with his small group providing meals for the Interfaith Hospitality Network, an organization that helps people transition from homelessness to employment.
