

SPORTS X-TREME

Vol. 6, No. 2

Lafayette Elementary School

November 8, 2013

MLB Managers Finally Get To Challenge Plays

by Ethan Lasser, 5G

Have you ever watched baseball on TV and seen a horrible call by the ump? Well, that is not going to happen anymore (probably). Finally, managers can now challenge plays in the MLB! Managers can only challenge one time in the first six innings and two times from the seventh inning until the completion of the game, so three challenges in all. However, just like always, the manager can still request that the umps talk over any play to see if the other umps have a different decision. They still cannot challenge whether a pitch is a ball or strike. If a manager has used up all his replays, then home runs will still be reviewed by the umps without the manager having to request a challenge. The plays will be reviewed using umps that are in the central MLB Advanced Media facilities in New York, and then they will call the decision back to the baseball stadium. Commissioner Bud Selig called this a "historic moment" for baseball.

The worst call ever! In 2010, pitcher Armando Galarraga was robbed of his perfect game.

The worst call any ump has made was in 2010 when Jim Joyce blew Armando Galarraga's only chance of getting a perfect game. There were two outs in the bottom of the ninth and Detroit was winning 3-0 over Cleveland. Armando Galarraga was one out away from getting his first-ever perfect game. Jason Donald hit an in-field grounder to the first baseman, Miguel Cabrera. He threw it to the pitcher, Armando

Galarraga, who was covering first and waiting to hear the last out of his perfect game. But all he heard was Jim Joyce saying "safe!" and a ton of fans booing. Instead of a perfect game, he got a one-hitter. Later at the press conference that night Jim Joyce said, "I just cost that kid a perfect game." Before the next game, Jim Joyce went out to umpire home plate and Galarraga shook his hand. They hugged while Joyce apologized to him for the big mistake he had made.

You see, that is why we need challenges.

Inside

Obstruction?.....	2
Big Papi & Yadi.....	2
MLB Award Predictions.....	3
Baseball's Top Rivalries.....	4
Super Bowl Predictions.....	5
Top 5 NFL QBs.....	6
Heisman Watch.....	7
Calvin or Dez?.....	10
College Football Standings.....	11
Cross Country.....	12
Heisman Answer.....	12

Come on, Obstruction?

by Noah Weitzner 5JB

It's game three of the 2013 World Series. Will Middlebrooks (Red Sox third basemen) falls into the base path and Allen Craig (Cardinal's runner) trips over him. Allen Craig runs home and clearly seems to be out, but the ump calls him safe because of obstruction. Confusing? Yes, and controversial, too. If the ump had called an out, the Red Sox might have won that game instead of the Cardinals. Many people don't like the call because it gave the Cards the win. It's a good thing the Sox went on to win the World Series or this might have been the most controversial call ever.

“Big Papi” and “Yadi”: Ten Years Later

by Andy Burris, 5G

The 2013 World Series had the same teams facing off as the 2004 World Series, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Boston Red Sox. The 2004 World Series was a historic one. After trading away Babe Ruth in 1919, the Red Sox hadn't won a World Series up until 2004. They swept the Cardinals to “Reverse the Curse.” The Red Sox also made history that year in the American League Championship Series. They went down 3-0, a deficit that had never been overcome. However, they won the next four games of the series, changing history in the process. Then they started off the World Series with a lead, and never were losing during the whole thing.

This World Series was a repeat match-up for the two teams, and again the Red Sox emerged the winners. But there are only two players left from the 2004 World Series, Yadier “Yadi” Molina of the Cardinals and David “Big Papi” Ortiz of the Red Sox. How have they done since 2004? Let's find out.

Molina started off his career in 2004 and was inexperienced in comparison to Ortiz, who had seven years of playing already. So naturally, Molina's stats will not be as good as Ortiz's. Also, Molina is a catcher, and catchers have to spend most of their time practicing with their pitchers, not practicing their hitting. Ortiz can devote all of his time to hitting, as he rarely fields, because he is a DH.

While Molina has averaged 8.9 home runs a year since 2004, his home run totals have increased recently. He hadn't had more than eight home runs a year through 2010, but he has not had less than twelve since, with a high of 22 in 2012. Ortiz has averaged 34.2 HRs a year and has never had fewer than 23 in a year since 2004. Ortiz has an amazing .331 batting average; only 24 people have a better lifetime average than that. Molina has a .284 average, which puts him tied for 15th of all time among catchers. They are both kind of slow and only have a combined 17 triples since 2004.

Cont'd on p. 3

Since 2004

Player	David Ortiz	Yadier Molina
Avg.	.331	.284
2B	373	226
3B	14	3
HR	342	89
RBI	1090	546
BB	843	328

“Big Papi” and “Yadi”: Ten Years Later...Cont'd from p. 2

In the end, Ortiz has outdone Molina since 2004. But they both did great in this year's World Series. They had the two best averages in the World Series of players who played in the whole postseason, Ortiz with an average of .688, the second best ever, and Molina .304.

Yadier Molina looks on as David Ortiz watches his home run fly out of the park in the 2013 World Series.

MLB Award Predictions

by Eli Moore, 5JL

Francona and Hurdle, AL and NL Managers of the Year

I think that Terry Francona will be manager of the year in the AL. Francona took Cleveland, a team that was ranked 30th the previous season, and made the Indians into a wild card contender. Francona managed the Red Sox from 2004-2011 and led them to their World Series wins in 2004 and 2007. This year I don't know how Francona did it, but after a 68-94 season, he coached the Indians to a 92-70 season. That is a 24-win difference.

I think Clint Hurdle will be manager of the year in the NL because he and the Pirates made the playoffs as a wild card team. The Pirates, like the Indians, did not have the most thrilling records, but Hurdle made a big difference. Before this season the Pirates were 79-83. Hurdle led this year's Pirates to a 94-68 record, a 25-win difference. Before he was manager of the Pirates, he managed the Rockies. Both managers Hurdle and Francona played in the majors; Francona was a first baseman and outfielder, and Hurdle was an outfielder.

Myers and Fernandez, AL and NL Rookies of the Year

I think that Will Myers will be Rookie of the Year (ROY) in the AL because he led the Rays to the playoffs. Myers had one play that everyone was talking about in the playoffs when he called off Desmond Jennings, but then did not catch the ball. Myers had some pretty good stats with 13 home runs, 53 RBI's, and a .293 batting average. Myers is a big ROY possibility. I think that Jose Fernandez will be the Rookie of the Year in the National league. A lot of people will disagree with me, but Jose Fernandez is second in the league for his ERA of 2.19. He had some other eye-popping stats with 172.2 innings pitched, 187 strikeouts, and only giving up 111 hits. The reason I think that Fernandez will be ROY in the NL is because Puig was not as much of a team leader as Fernandez. Also, Fernandez has the best stats ever held as a rookie-starting pitcher. Cont'd on p. 4

More MLB Award Predictions...Cont'd from p. 3

Scherzer and Kerkshaw for Cy Young

Max Scherzer is Detroit Ace.

I think Cy Young in the AL is going to be Max Scherzer. I think that Max Scherzer will be the Cy Young winner because before the season Justin Verlander was the ace for the Tigers, but Scherzer looks like the new Tigers' Ace. If you compared his stats between this year and last, you would see a big change. He has 21 wins, a 2.90 ERA, 240 strikeouts, and only three losses. I think that Clayton Kerkshaw will win the CY Young in the NL because he has had such a good ERA; also, he has changed the Dodgers. As a young pitcher, his stats are amazing. He has 16 wins, a 1.83 ERA and 201 strikeouts.

Davis and McCutchen, AL and NL MVPs

I think that Chris Davis will be the AL MVP because in previous seasons he has had only a few hits and a couple of home runs and RBIs. Once a fourth-string pinch hitter and now a starter with O's, Davis has different stats now. His records including over 40 home runs and 40 doubles, as well as the most home runs in a single season. Some people have suggested that Davis took steroids this year, but he's no A-Rod. His stats were very different from previous seasons. A .286 AVG, 53 Home Runs, and 138 RBI's.

I think that the NL MVP will be Andrew McCutchen. Every year McCutchen has one of the top batting averages in the MLB. This year McCutchen was able to lead the Pirates to a playoff seed for the first time in a long time. McCutchen's stats are amazing. He had a .317 AVG, 21 home runs, and 84 RBIs. These are the players who I think will win these awards.

Baseball's Top Rivalries

by Ethan Mishra, 5JB

There are a lot of rivalries in baseball, but this is my list of the Top 10 of all time. Most rivalries are based on the locations of two teams—like Boston and New York. A rivalry can begin with something as simple as when one team's pitcher hits a player with a pitch and the other team's pitcher does the same thing—but this time on purpose. That is often when a brawl starts. The batter charges the mound and the dugouts clear. These rivalries can last for years, even decades. As you can see from the list most teams who are rivals are located close to one another.

What's your top rivalry in baseball? If it didn't make Ethan's list, tell the SXT why you think it should have. Write your reply and put it in Ms. Echave's box by Friday, Nov. 15.

1. Boston Red Sox - New York Yankees
2. Los Angeles Dodgers - San Francisco Giants
3. Chicago Cubs - St. Louis Cardinals
4. New York Mets - New York Yankees
5. San Francisco Giants - Oakland Athletics
6. Los Angeles Angels - Los Angeles Dodgers
7. Washington Nationals - Baltimore Orioles
8. Miami Marlins - Tampa Bay Rays
9. Chicago Cubs - Milwaukee Brewers
10. Philadelphia Phillies - New York Mets

Super Bowl Predictions:

Will Chiefs take the Seahawks in Super Bowl XLVIII?

by Nico Engvall, 5C

The NFL season has had some surprising winners so far. Very few people thought that the Kansas City Chiefs would be 9-0 by this point. In this article, I'm going to make some predictions about the NFC and AFC champions.

First let's look at the NFC. For the division winners, I predict the Dallas Cowboys, which lead the NFC East with a record of 5-4. They just got three new players: new defensive end, Everett Brown; rookie safety, Jakar Hamilton, and a defensive tackle named Jay Ratliff.

The leading team for the NFC North is the Green Bay Packers with a record of 5-2. The Packers just recently lost wide receiver James Jones with a sprained ankle, and it is questionable whether he will play in the upcoming games. Next we have the New Orleans Saints who are leading the NFC South with a record of 6-2. With Drew Brees on fire and throwing amazing passes, they have a good chance of making it far in the playoffs.

The Seahawks will beat the Saints in the NFC championship game to get to the Super Bowl.

I pick the Chiefs to beat the Denver Broncos in the AFC championship game.

Last, we have the Seattle Seahawks, who are looking amazing with an 8-1 record.

Now, let's take a look at the NFC wild card teams. My first team is the Detroit Lions. Matt Stafford and Megatron--aka Calvin Johnson--have been a great matchup this season. My second wild card team is the San Francisco 49ers. Colin Kaepernick has been great for the 49ers. He has the arm of a pitcher in the MLB, the speed of an Olympic medalist, and the skill of all QBs combined. Now let's look at the AFC. In first place in the AFC East we have the New England Patriots, with a record of 7-2. The Pats have lost a lot of very skilled players this year, such as Wes Welker who went to the Denver Broncos. The leader of the AFC North is the Cincinnati Bengals, with a record of 6-3. Recently, Vontaze Burfict was fined $21,000 for a head butt to New York Jets wide receiver Steven Hill.

Next we have the AFC South. The leader is the Indianapolis Colts, with a record of 6-2. They just lost wide receiver Reggie Wayne with a torn ACL. Last we have the AFC West. In first place we have the Kansas City Chiefs, who are undefeated at 9-0. The Chiefs just got a new head coach, Andy Reid, who came from the Philadelphia Eagles.

Now let's look at the AFC wild card teams. My first team is the Denver Broncos, who recently got Wes Welker from the Patriots. Peyton Manning and Welker have been a really good combination this season. My second team is the Miami Dolphins. Ryan Tannehill, the QB for the Dolphins, has been on fire lately. The whole team has been amazing, playing the best I've ever seen from them.

After learning all this information, I predict that the Kansas City Chiefs and the Seattle Seahawks will be in the 2014 Super Bowl. It would be Kansas City's first Super Bowl appearance since Super Bowl I. I predict that the Chiefs will win the game, 14-10, and take home their first Super Bowl win.

NFL's Top Five Quarterbacks

by Eli Kim, 5JB

- Here they are:
1. Peyton Manning
 2. Matthew Stafford
 3. Drew Brees
 4. Aaron Rodgers
 5. Tom Brady

1 I think that Peyton Manning of the Denver Broncos is the number 1 QB in the NFL. On week 8, Peyton made 30 completions, 44 attempts, 354 yards and 4 touchdowns. He scored 31 points in the last quarter. In his career, his rating is 96.7, 62,406 yards and 465 touchdowns. By week 5 he had set a new NFL record by scoring the most touchdowns in a five-game span. So far this season, his rating is 119.4, 2,919 yards and 29 touchdowns. I think that he will do well this season because he has an amazing arm and he has a lot of very good players to pass to. That is why I think he is the NFL's number 1 QB.

Peyton Manning: Best QB

#2 I think that Matthew Stafford of the Detroit Lions is the number 2 QB because on week 8 he made 33-48 completions, 488 yards, 1 touchdown and two interceptions. In his career his rating is 84.6, 15,424 yards and 96 touchdowns. For this season, his rating is 94.8, 2,617 yards and 16 touchdowns. I think that he will do well this season because he has an amazing arm and a 6'5 wide receiver who we all know as Calvin Johnson. That is why I think he is number 2.

Drew Brees has an amazing arm.

#3 I think that Drew Brees of the New Orleans Saints is the number 3 QB. On week 8 he made 26-34 completions, 332 yards and 5 touchdowns. In his career his rating is 94.9, 48,209 yards and 343 touchdowns. For this season his rating is 109.2, 2,290 yards and 19 touchdowns. I think he will do well this season because he has a great arm and this Purdue graduate has a lot of football experience, both in college and in the pros. That is why I think he is number 3.

Aaron Rodgers: sidelined temporarily.

#4 Aaron Rodgers of the Green Bay Packers is number 4 because on week 8 he made 24-29 completions, 285 yards, 2 touchdowns. In his career his rating is 105.2, 23,852 yards and 186 touchdowns. For this season his rating is 108.0, 2,191 yards and 15 touchdowns. I think he will do well this season because he has a great arm and he has great players. That is why I think he is number 4. [Aaron Rodgers was hurt during Monday night's loss to the Bears. He suffered a fractured collarbone, and as we went to press, there was no timetable for his return to the Packers.]

#5 I think that Tom Brady of the New England Patriots is number 5 because on week 8 he had 13-22 completions, 116 yards, 1 touchdown and 1 interception. His career rating is 95.9, 47,062 yards and 347 touchdowns. In just this season his rating is 82.7, 2,256 and 13 touchdowns. I think that he will do well in this season because he has a great arm and he has Rob Gronkowski the best TE (tight end) in the NFL. That is why I think he is number 5. [Unfortunately, due to hamstring, back and forearm issues, Gronkowski is on the injury list for the rest of this season, so it's doubtful that he'll play against the Steelers this Sunday].

Heisman Watch:

No Shortage of Talent

by Eli Moore, 5JL

Who will win the Heisman trophy? Before making my predictions, I looked at stats and previous season records of past winners and compared them with current players in the same positions that play like them. Here's what I found out.

A.J. McCarron

A.J. McCarron is the starting quarterback for the Alabama Crimson Tide. He is preparing for the NFL. Last year he led the Crimson Tide to the BCS national championship win. This season A.J. McCarron has been doing very well, and the Crimson Tide is undefeated. In previous season he has done pretty well throwing only eight interceptions in three seasons. McCarron has also thrown for 5,965 passing yards and he has thrown 43 touchdowns. He has been to four bowl games and plans to go to another. He is like Andy Dalton. He has the same type of mentality to lead his team to the playoffs as a young QB.

Teddy Bridgewater

Teddy Bridgewater is the starting quarterback for the Louisville Cardinals. Last year Bridgewater took the Cardinals to the Sugar Bowl and upset the Gators. This year the Cardinals are undefeated with no competition. Bridgewater has thrown 20 picks in two seasons. In previous seasons Bridgewater has some pretty good stats. He has 5,847 passing yards in his previous seasons and he has thrown 41 TDs. He does well in the pocket and has only been sacked five times. I would compare him to someone like Colin Kaepernick because he can run with the ball and take his team to the playoffs.

Sammy Watkins

Sammy Watkins is a starting wide receiver for the Clemson Tigers. You might have seen his name or heard about him. For three years now, since his freshman season, Watkins has been making big plays. Sammy Watkins and the Tigers are undefeated and number 4 in the country. In previous seasons his stats have been eye-popping. He has 1,927 yards in two seasons he also has 25 receiving touchdowns and 150 receptions. He has great hands which is crucial in the NFL. Watkins is fast and he's not a big guy. I would compare Watkins to Larry Fitzgerald because they both have great hands and they're both fast guys who are able to make something happen.

Cont'd on P. 8

Heisman Watch: No shortage of Contenders...Cont'd from P. 7

Johnny Manziel

Johnny Manziel is the starting quarterback for the Texas A&M Aggies. We all know him as last year's Heisman winner, the freshman QB. This year Manziel thinks he is going to win it again. He had a really good season last year with many achievements such as a Cotton Bowl victory and, of course, a Heisman. In his only full season Manziel has had some mind-blowing stats. He threw nine picks, but he also threw for 3,706 yards and 26 touchdowns. I can compare him to Russell Wilson because he is fast and he is a big playmaker who can guide his team to the playoffs as a rookie.

Johny Manziel is trying to win back-to-back Heisman trophies.

Tajh Boyd

Tajh Boyd is the starting quarterback for the Clemson Tigers. Tajh Boyd and the Tigers have lost just one game. Boyd has Sammy Watkins another Heisman candidate to pass to, so their duo is almost like Peyton Manning and Wes Welker. Boyd has been doing exceptionally well this year with stats right now that rival Andrew Luck's senior year, and look where Andrew Luck is now. In previous seasons Boyd has done well but nothing like this year. In past years he has had some breakout stats, including 8,053 yards, but this year he's on target to break some records. Boyd also has 73 passing touchdowns and has thrown 28 interceptions. Some people might wonder why he wasn't Heisman with stats like that. I would compare him to Michael Vick because he is very fast and he finds his receivers.

Marcus Mariota

Marcus Mariota is the starting quarterback for the Oregon Ducks. Mariota has been a starting QB since his freshman season. This year he is attacking the ground and finding his receivers. Therefore, the Ducks are undefeated and number 2 in the country. Mariota does not have Kenjon Barner to hand the ball off to. Last season, Mariota led the Ducks to a Tostitos Fiesta Bowl win. Last year, Mariota also put up some stats on the board, With 2,677 passing yards, six interceptions, and 32 touchdowns. Mariota has really good potential as a NFL quarter back. I would compare him to the new Tony Romo.

Cont'd on P. 9

Mariota leads the undefeated Ducks, the # 3 team in the country.

More Heisman Contenders To Watch... Cont'd from P. 8.

T.J. Yeldon of the Crimson Tide

T.J. Yeldon

T.J. Yeldon is the starting running back for the Alabama Crimson Tide. Yeldon has taken over at running back because Eddie Lacy is in the NFL now. A.J. McCarron relies on him to get the first down. Yeldon is a sophomore and he still makes big things happen. He has good footwork and he is a big running back who can break tackles. In previous season(s) Yeldon has had some good stats. He has rushed for 1,108 yards and 12 touchdowns. He also has 11 receptions. If I had to compare him to an NFL player it would be Eddie Lacy because Yeldon has been around him and watched him. Also. Lacy probably taught him some stuff that he can use.

Jameis Winston

Jameis Winston is the starting quarterback for the Florida State Seminoles. Jameis Winston is only a freshman, but he looks like a favorite to win it. Look at how Manziel did last season, and right now Jameis Winston has better stats than Manziel did at this point in his freshman season. Winston is quite an athlete. He also plays baseball, He pitches, so he has an arm he is sort of like Bo Jackson. The Seminoles are number 2 in the country. I bet Florida State doesn't miss EJ Manuel. Jameis Winston is exploding scoreboards with his stats. He already has over 1,500 yards, but he also gets sacked a lot. If Manziel can win the Heisman as a freshman, Winston ought to be able to do it, too. The only reason why he wouldn't win it is because this year contenders are hunting for the Heisman. I would compare him to Alex Smith, not the fastest guy out there, but the one who tries to get the extra yard and even if his wide receivers aren't the greatest, he'll find a way to work with them.

Winston looks for a receiver.

Guess Who Never Won a Heisman?

There have been 74 winners of the Heisman Trophy since it started in 1934. Almost all of these winners are college football legends. But even more stars have missed out on the honor, whether they were snubbed over age or race, had the misfortune of playing in another player's shadow, came from a small school, or were simply overlooked.

Which of the following players never won a Heisman? (answer on p. 12)

- | | | |
|-------------------|-----------------|-------------------|
| 1. Dan Marino | 3. Michael Vick | 5. Calvin Johnson |
| 2. Peyton Manning | 4. Drew Brees | 6. Deion Sanders |

Who's the Top Wide Receiver?

Calvin Johnson Vs Dez Bryant

by Eli Kim, 5JB

Editor's Note: Wide receivers, Calvin Johnson and Dez Bryant are both having great years for their respective teams, the Detroit Lions and the Dallas Cowboys, but which is really the league's top wide receiver?

Calvin Johnson

Calvin Johnson makes an amazing catch proving his skill.

Calvin Johnson is 6'5"; weighs 236 pounds, and he ran the 40-yard dash in 4.35 seconds. He was drafted in the first round of the NFL draft in 2007. He was the second pick by the Detroit Lions. His wingspan is 6'10. He went to college at Georgia Tech, and he has seven years of professional football experience.

Calvin Johnson has been one of the best wide receivers in the NFL since he started playing, and he has 47 receptions, 821 yards, and seven touchdowns in this season. In his career he has 535 REC, 8,657 YDs and 61 TDs.

Calvin Johnson has had a really good season so far. He has the record for most receiving yardage in a single season (2012). In one game against the Cowboys he got 14 REC, 329 YDs and one TD. I think that nobody else has gotten 329 yards with four receptions in one game.

Dez Bryant

Dez Bryant is 6'2"; weighs 222 pounds and he did his 40-yard dash in 4.5 seconds. He was drafted in the first round in 2010. He was drafted 24th by the Dallas Cowboys. His wingspan is 6'3". He played college football at Oklahoma State and has four years of professional football experience. Dez Bryant has 45 receptions, 641 YDs, and eight TDs. Dez Bryant is a really good player. When he played the Lions in Week 8 he got three REC for 72 YDs, and two TDs. The Cowboys are a really good team but they're not better than the Lions.

I think that Calvin is better than Dez because he has all the advantages—height, weight, wingspan and speed. He can jump over four people when Matthew Stafford throws the ball up high enough for him to get it. It's not that Dez Bryant isn't good; it's just that Calvin is better. Calvin also has a lot more experience in football and he's not as violent and ferocious as Dez.

Dez Bryant is number 2 on my WR (wide receiver) list. As I said Dez is talented, strong, has good hands, and knows how to read the defenders. In 50 pro games Dez Bryant has 242 receptions for 3,340 YDs and 33 TDs. Calvin Johnson has 217 receptions for 3,362 YDs and 25 TDs. So you see that Dez edges out Calvin in the wide receiver category.

College Football Rankings for Week 11

by Eli Kim, 5JB

- The Top 3
1. Alabama
 2. Florida State
 3. Oregon

Together with No. 4, Ohio State, and No. 18, Northern Illinois, these are the only undefeated teams in college football this year.

BCS Standings

RK	TEAM	RECORD
1	Alabama	8-0
2	Florida State	8-0
3	Oregon	8-0
4	Ohio State	9-0
5	Stanford	7-1
6	Baylor	7-0
7	Clemson	8-1
8	Missouri	8-1
9	Auburn	8-1
10	Oklahoma	7-1
11	Miami (FL)	7-1
12	South Carolina	7-2
13	LSU	7-2
14	Oklahoma State	7-1
15	Texas A&M	7-2
16	Fresno State	8-0
17	Michigan State	8-1
18	Northern Illinois	9-0
19	UCLA	6-2
20	Louisville	7-1

Attention Fourth Grade Sports Writers!
 You can work on the next Sports X-Treme edition!
 Coverage meeting is Tuesday, Nov. 12
 Special protocol meeting for all new writers is Wednesday.
 Both meetings are at 1 p.m. in computer lab.

Congratulations to The Cross Country Team

The boys were city champs and the girls were city runner-ups. Thanks to Ms. Paul, Mr. Jackson, and all the other people who helped. Great Job! See you next season!

On Saturday, Nov. 2, the boys and girls cross country teams competed in the DCIAA City-Wide Championship meet.

The boys are the city-wide champs and the girls were runners-up for that honor. The boys claimed seven of the top 10 spots, and all posted under 7-minute miles! The boys were led by James Paul, who came in second overall, followed by Jay Murray, Luca Ciagne and Nicky Cassol-Pawson (3rd through 5th, respectively), then came Matias Hernandez and Colin Bennett in the 7th and 8th slots, with Emmett Patterson rounding out our top ten finishers in 10th.

Our girls were lead by Regan Waterman, who placed second overall. Schuyler Phillips took 6th place followed by Zoey Chineme and Tusani Jackson in the 10th and 11th slots, and Rebecca Meroney also in the top half of finishers in 22nd place.

--Noah Weitzner, 5JB

Guess Who Never Won a Heisman?

Peyton Manning never won a Heisman, but neither did any of the other superstars mentioned in our question on p. 9. They were ALL overlooked!

The Sports X-Treme Vol. 6, No. 2 is published by & for the students of Lafayette ES

5701 Broad Branch Rd. NW
Washington, DC 20015

Editors-in-Chief:
*Weston Duncan, Eli Moore,
Noah Weitzner*

Assistant Editor-in-Chief:
Ethan Mishra

Editorial Board:
*Andy Burris, Doug Cohen,
Nico Engvall, Eli Kim, Max
Jazyanka, Ethan Lasser, RJ
Resch*

Proofreaders:
Ms. Jean's Class

Official Folders:
Mr. Jewett's Class

Advisor: Kathy Echave

Assisting: Afsheen Benab,
Nathan Wieand

Principal: Lynn Main