

The University of Tennessee Health Science Center
Professor and Chair, Department of Radiation Oncology

The University of Tennessee College of Medicine seeks a diverse pool of nominees and applicants for the part-time position of Professor and Chair in the Department of Radiation Oncology on the main campus of the Health Science Center in Memphis, TN. We seek a recognized leader with a superb academic background, including strong clinical and research credentials, a demonstrated commitment to education, experience in mentoring junior faculty, and a proven record in administration and management in academics. Additional responsibilities include the overall administration of the department, (i.e., budget, staff, space and other resources) and management of the educational program for health professionals.

Applicants should hold the M.D. degree or equivalent, be board-certified in radiology with a subspecialty in Radiation Oncology, and eligible for licensure in Tennessee upon appointment. Salary and rank will be commensurate with qualifications and experience. The successful candidate should have strong credentials in education and research, and must be capable of providing vigorous academic leadership for the further growth and development of this clinical department. Applicants should have documented accomplishments and national recognition in teaching and research, a proven record in administration and management in academics, and national involvement in professional organizations of discipline.

Qualified applicants should submit a letter of interest and qualifications accompanied by curriculum vitae, and the names and addresses of three or more references to:

Lee S. Schwartzberg, M.D. Committee Chair, Radiation Oncology Chair Search Committee
