

THE INTERVIEW REVIEW FROM THE PEW

Sony has managed to get embroiled in an international Brouhaha which is, sadly, more 'brou' than 'haha.'

"The Interview" is a meandering mish mash that tries much too hard for laughs and languishes in its own silly one joke premise.

Seth Rogen and James Franco are mired in sophomoric humor as the film tries to amass today's current and shameful key elements for success such as anal humor, nudity, drugs and bloody violence.

Recruited by the CIA to assassinate North Korean's Kim Jong Un, Rogen and Franco succeed in snuffing out the film, as well.
