

August - Things to do.

(Still) Good luck keeping the grass green. As you all know the grass will not die if it turns brown, it just goes dormant. It WILL green up when (or if) it ever rains again. Personally I would not waste the (drinking) water on the grass, it's not a "green" thing to do. I am noticing a lot of people around us don't water like they did some years ago. You will want to watch out for your plants as it's possible they may need some watering. I just got our water bill- double last month and we are basically only watering the plants in planters.

Schools starting, when I was a kid it seems like at the end of summer we would rearrange our bedrooms just for a change. I always was amazed at the change in a room just by moving stuff around or adding a new throw rug or changing the bedsheets. (course if you want major change, call me we'll get you a new house)

With school starting it wouldn't be a bad idea to review your families safety tips in case of a fire or other family emergency. No one wants to think about it but a little planning up front makes it easier. Make sure you got a well-stocked first aid kit at home and some bottled water and other items so you're ready if need be. There are tons of online sources for lists but can't hurt to be ready.

That's all I got for this month. Enjoy the summer!

Homes sell faster and for more money when they are in good shape and properly maintained. Call or email me with ANY questions you might have,