

Naomi Chase

Naomi has served multiple congregations around the country as a Jewish educator and administrator. She's passionate about instilling Jewish learning in an environment that promotes creative curriculum development and exploration. Her varied experiences give her a unique perspective on managing the challenges of preserving Jewish values and rituals with modern family pace and structure. Whether she is engaged in the classroom or with teachers and families, Naomi supports religious school, family education and community outreach in a way that promotes unity and leadership. She holds a Bachelors Degree in English from Ursuline College, a Masters Degree in Education and Jewish Studies from the Cleveland College of Jewish Studies, and certifications in Holocaust Education and ESL. She is also a published freelance writer.
