Workshop Choices
What	Where	Leader
The "Hands Up! Don't Shoot!" workshop requires courage and intentionality. Participants will discuss some of the lessons and transformational opportunities to be learned from Ferguson. We will ask, how can art help create authentic spaces that acknowledge and value different racial experiences, help communities discuss issues of racial oppression, and facilitate the exploration of racial privilege?	Mezzanine	Wendi Manuel-Scott
"What if Travon Martin or Michael Brown's Parents visited your Congregation?" Rev. Leon Dunkley invites participants to consider their congregation's capacity to receive parents grieving this loss. He asks: "what should be or could be offered by Unitarian Universalism."	Crocker Program Room	Rev. Leon Dunkley
"What's in a Name" - Mark McMullen, whose heritage includes Cherokee and Rev. Scott will lead a workshop on the Washington D.C. Football Team's name, stressing the social factors that contributed to the choice of the name in the first place, and inviting the participants to recognize their capacity to create change.	Jordan Room	Rev. Scott Sammler-Michael and Mark McMullen
"Art Expression using collage, journaling, and drawing" - Use words and images in a work of art to reflect upon your experiences and thoughts during the Racial Justice Conference.	Church Hospitality Room	Denise Ditmar
"Make and Take Your Own Poetry Slam" Want to host your own poetry slam? Come and learn from those who have, and from Paula Cole Jones, who hopes to share the experience of the Poetry Slam throughout our district.	Sanctuary	Kevin Manuel-Scott, Michael Masiak, and Paula Cole Jones
