Matthew Bourne's Sleeping Beauty Curtain Raisers Program

OVER THE LAST 4 YEARS, Re:Bourne, the education arm of Matthew Bourne's dance company New Adventures has produced the Curtain Raiser Program. This project will allow a group of thirty young people to work intensively over six days with two New Adventures Principal dancers to create a 5 – 7 minute response to themes from the production Sleeping Beauty.

This select group will create their own unique piece of dance and perform it on the world famous Ahmanson Theatre stage. The Curtain Raisers will be introduced from stage by Matthew Bourne. This project is graciously being underwritten for the Girl Scouts, therefore there is no charge if selected to participate.

The benefits of this outstanding program are:

- Quality, highly memorable and aspirational experiences for the Girl Scouts
- Unique insight to Matthew Bourne's work, by creating a mini-company who feel like they belong to the wider New Adventures family and connected to their home venue
- A performance opportunity in front of a real theatre going audience and Girl Scouts family and friends
- Development of performance skills, character, and narrative through movement
- Learning repertoire and technique development
